Download Font Psl Natrinthorn 51 Paul Carlson looks at how the renovation of Detroit's former, dilapidated 'Big Three' auto facilities has left The Detroit area is becoming a magnet for global-scale, digitally savvy companies, one of which is international electric car-maker Tesla. But in Detroit's Rock Ventures district, the arrival of a leading electronic, software and data storage company last month is heralding a new breed of global high-tech companies -- and a new way of doing business. Behind the scenes, the bucolic campus, with its digitally modern internet hub and a 147-acre forest park, represents a sound business model for an economy devastated by a decade of stagnating GDP growth and a shrinking population. Talent and development The peak business days at the new site in the suburbs of northwest Detroit started in late 2014, and the city's unemployment rate has dropped below 8 percent for the first time in a decade. As the number of heads of global companies now moving into Detroit swells -- and as Detroit's empty storefronts continue to shrink -- city leaders, business leaders and residents are responding with confidence. Detroit's growth In fact, global data show Detroit to be among the fastest-growing cities in the world, with a population increase of 8.4 percent between 2012 and 2016. I have worked as an apprentice laborer for 5 years. Currently the job is for 220 a week and I take home about 300. I love the people I work with and the work I do. The job has taught me a lot about the business world and has made me have a set of skills that can be applied to other things. My current boss has told me he will not be paying my apprentice wages when my work contract ends in June. He said that I need to start looking for something more permanent because he is not willing to pay me what he sees as my value as an apprentice. I am not sure what I want to do in the future. I would like to have my own business and am thinking about selling clothes or something similar. I would like to continue to work in a job I enjoy and learn to make money. I also would like to invest my money wisely. I have a family of two (6 and 8) but would like to do some babysitting in the evening once in a while. If I continue to work as an apprentice I won't be able to afford to babysit but I would like to. I'm not looking for a 1 and done deal. I don't have any experience in starting up a business. I would love to be a stay at home mom but I realize that unless I save and put something aside for a rainy day then I wouldn't be able to afford to have my own family one day. I just don't know what my next steps should be. I feel trapped between a rock and a hard place. Any advice? Without having the financial details, I think you need to sit down and talk to your employer about making a deal for your future. While you don't want to bargain, you can say to him, "Listen, I really love what I do, but I don't want to continue to work here on these terms. I have big dreams and I think there is a better future for me. I want to do this but I need to know what I should be working on." It would also be worth talking with your mom and your dad about this. They have had years of experience in finances. They could also help you determine whether there is a deal that you can strike with your employer. Being a serious worker
